Developing bespoke training resources

If your business requires support and assistance to develop their own bespoke training resources, then we have the skills to help, examples include; safety induction for new starters, graduate health and safety workshops, director safety tours, toolbox talks, safety briefings etc. Once developed we can also deliver the courses or train your selected employees to deliver them instead.

Safety skills review

Should you need to review your employee's health and safety skills to gauge where learning and development is needed, then we can undertake this activity and provide recommendations. These reviews help create a fuller picture and identify where the gaps lie, we can also use the information from the review to produce bespoke training matrices and training programs (see below).

Health and safety training program

The final piece to the training jigsaw is a 'health and safety training program', these are designed to ensure structure and consistency with regards to the training provision within your business. The training program considers your employees required skills, career aspirations and CPD requirements as well as other business-related factors such as business growth, available budgets, resources etc. We can help your business develop health and safety training programs, support implementation and monitor their effectiveness over time.
